WeatherAction predicts Early blasts of winter (not 'Barbecue Autumn weather' of others) for November

- A Major North Sea Storm Surge threat to sea defences
- Bitter North winds and snow likely to follow

Headline Winter Forecast 09-10 video released (forecast prod July09 Link below)

The WeatherAction 15-45day ahead Britain & Ireland Long range forecast for November just released (18 Oct) (Full forecast available via <http://www.weatheraction.com/member.asp>) warns a major North sea storm surge threat to parts of England's East Coast and Holland is likely to strike 17th-19th November.

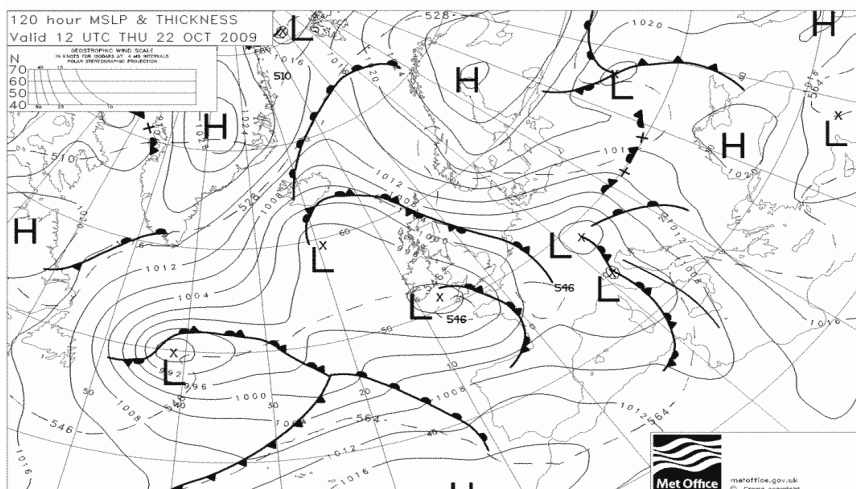

Piers Corbyn, astrophysicist and forecaster of WeatherAction correctly predicted in long-range the North Sea storm of Nov 9th 2007 which saw Prime Minister Gordon Brown & Minister Hilary Benn manning the sea defences; and the record sea swell of end Nov / 1st Dec 2007 which struck Ireland & western Britain (see Information below). He says: "The forecast for this North sea surge first became apparent in a draft forecast produced in early August. Subsequent work has increased our confidence that it will happen to 85% See <http://www.weatheraction.com/member.asp> for details"

Current News confirms WeatherAction October storms forecast

The two consecutive Red Warnings of storms 18-20th Oct (B confidence = 75%) & 21-25th Oct (A confidence = 85%) in WeatherAction long range October forecast are now (Oct 18th) showing in standard meteorology. The storm developments in the two time windows are merging and WeatherAction detailed forecast statement for 21-25 Oct as issued on 16th July (100days ahead) and repeated without change in the 30day ahead forecast excellently match the standard meteorology map for 22 Oct (120hr ahead) copied below.

- From WeatherAction forecast for 21-25 Oct issued 16 July 09 (& repeated 30 Sept) -100 days ahead:
"Likely possible weather map scenario:
Deep Low pressure probably tracks from South-West through south Ireland / S Wales & Central England.
Jet Stream significantly South."

- And now you see it - 100 hours ahead -
